Also issues of The Organiser (1937-1939).

Biography
"The desire for a Union of Unions" gave birth to the Trades and Labour Council of Queensland. The first Brisbane Trades and Labour Council was established on 1st September 1885. Its existence was interrupted in the 1890s by the formation of the Australian Labor Federation, and in the second decade of the twentieth century by the One Big Union Movement. However the Brisbane Trades and Labor Council re-emerged under the name of Brisbane Industrial Council of Workers on 26th February 1914. The other labour movements working parallel with the BIC during this period were the 8-Hour Anniversary Union (previously known as the 8 Hour Day Committee) that existed since 1861 and the Board of Management of Trades and Labor Hall (since 1911). In July 1919, the Brisbane Industrial Council was dissolved and the Trade Hall Council was established. This was a loose amalgamation of the 8-Hour Anniversary Union, the Trade Hall Management Board and the Brisbane Industrial Council. This organisation was split up again in late 1919, and in April 1922 the Trades and Labour Council in its present form emerged. In 1947, the Trades and Labour Council became the Trades and Labor Council of Queensland and undertook the central organisation of the State Regional Labour Councils. (See Appendix A : Development Chronology).
The TLC of Qld is the official State Branch of the Australian Council of Trade Unions.

The Trades and Labor Council of Queensland functions through a general Council, which is made up of, elected delegates from the various affiliated unions. The council meets regularly, approximately once or twice per month, in addition special meetings are called for special issues to be discussed. The council elects office bearers of the executive, as well as members of various special committees, on an annual basis. The executive is comprised of the president, the secretary and chairpersons of various committees. The executive is responsible for the day to day running of the Council and effectively reports to the Council by having the minutes of its meeting regularly tabled at the general Council meetings. The executive meets more often than the general council.

The committees appointed by the council to examine special issues:
The Industrial Committee (later became The Disputes Committee), The Trade Hall Committee (later became Hall Committee), Labour Day Committee, Library Committee, Parliamentary Committee, Basic Wage Committee, Propaganda and Education
Committee. While these committees exist on paper and have members appointed annually, many of them rarely hold regular meetings. Some of the committees are semi-permanent in nature, others are appointed only for a limited time to deal with special issues as they arise.

The Trades and Labor Council of Queensland aims to co-ordinate union activity throughout the State, to provide greater strength for any union involved in industrial disputes, to act on behalf of any combination of Unions, to examine Parliamentary legislation, social changes, etc. which would affect the workers, to consider the need for trade union action on questions of social, economic or international importance.

Appendix A : Development Chronology

1861: Establishment of 8-Hour Day Committee.

1885: 1st September. Emergence of the first Brisbane Trades and Labor Council - very loosely organised, each union maintains its own autonomy. B.T.L.C. considered itself only as a co-ordinating body.

1887: B.T.L.C. becomes more politically orientated. Endorsed candidates for 1888 election.

1889: Printer Strike, Brisbane Trades and Labor Council disbands. Replaced by the Australian Labor Federation - The Worker as its organ.

Notes

In the 1990s the Trades and Labor Council of Queensland changed its name to the Australian Council of Trade Unions Queensland Branch (ACTUQ), and then to the Queensland Council of Unions (QCU). On occasion it was still referred to as the TLC. The terms used in this finding aid reflect the usage in the records described.
