Biography	Nat Phillips was born in New South Wales in 1883. His father was a prominent concert singer and his mother an actress/singer whose family had long been associated with the theatre. Her father, Ralph Tolano, is said to have put on the first production of East Lynne in Australia, while her brother, Joe, was a well-known and highly popular actor/stage manager in Australia over the last three decades of the nineteenth century. Nat Phillips made his debut stage appearance at the age of eight as an acrobat in an amateur show in Sydney, and four of his brothers (Ray, Harry, Jack, and Dave) similarly went on to carve out careers in theatre and film. At the age of 10, Nat Phillips teamed up with fellow acrobatic dancer, Tommy Armstrong, and toured Australia for the next ten years, before undertaking a tour of America at the age of 20. Nat Phillips stayed abroad for 12 years, working in America, England and Europe. In 1912, he and his wife Daisy Merritt returned to Australia and in 1914 Nat Phillips was asked to manage the Princess Theatre in Sydney and later the Gaiety and Bijou theatres in Melbourne, frequently managing, writing and composing in addition to his nightly performances. His most famous character, Stiffy the Rabbit-o, was introduced to audiences in late 1914, and by 1916, he was staging a number of one-act musical comedies (or 'revusicals') around the character. On July 16, 1916, he opened 'What Oh, Tonight' at Sydney's Princess Theatre with a new partner, Roy Rene, playing a character called 'Mo'. Response to the six shows they staged exceeded all expectations and for the next nine years, Nat Phillips and Roy Rene worked in partnership as 'Stiffy and Mo'. In 1925, Rene's tendency to prefer improvisation to rehearsals and his constant pushing of the boundaries of blue humour led to the temporary end of the partnership. Both comedians worked with other partners until in 1927, they bowed to public pressure and reformed 'Stiffy and Mo', choosing Brisbane for their debut reunion. The reunion was an overwhelming commercial success but it only lasted for 18 months. Phillips then put together his own 'Whirligig Revue Company', which included his wife and his brother Jack, but the onslaught of the talkies and the resulting demise of vaudeville struck a blow to his career. Nat Phillips died in Sydney on 21 June 1932, barely three and a half years after he and Rene ended their iconic partnership and just short of the age of 50. His former partner, Roy Rene, became an Australian theatre icon, with a career that stretched into the 1950s.

Abbreviations and General Information for Entries

1. Entries with an author identified, but followed (?) indicate this person's likely involvement as writer/adaptor, but the extent of that involvement has not yet been established. For example: Nat Phillips (?)
2. n/e = authorship not established.
3. N/A = Not Applicable.
4. M/S = Manuscript - either partial or complete text.
5. C/P = Character parts (for individual roles). These contain only the dialogue spoken by that character, and "feeder lines" - the last few words spoken by another character immediately beforehand. As such they are incomplete manuscripts.
6. Years entered with * indicate first known performance.
7. [complete] indicates complete dialogue text only - and not song lyrics. As songs were seldom integrated into revivals or musical sketches (old songs were frequently scrapped and new ones added) lyrics were rarely included in the texts. Should song lyrics be included in a text this is highlighted in the corresponding notes. Complete texts have their number of pages noted in the far right column (beside year/date). Where two or more texts are held the page numbers of each text are separated by a slash (i.e., 12/14 or 12/12). A + sign beside the number of pages indicates that the complete text is also accompanied by other related material.
8. [incomplete] indicates that a text or material collated under the same title are either incomplete or believed to be incomplete. The number of pages in the text or collated material is included in brackets within the Description section (i.e., 6p).
9. Each entry attempts to identify the most likely theatrical genre for the text. In some instances this is not clear and thus several possible genres are submitted. Such entries are indicated by (?). For example: Farce/Sketch (?).

Untitled Texts (UT)

1. As titles for the following text fragments have not yet been established, each is identified according to the first line of text on the first page of the manuscript fragment.

2. An item is therefore entered according to the first line of dialogue (or lines, if the first line is short). For example; fallen in." / Tom: "That's nothing."

3. When a character name is indicated first, the entry is identified with the name followed by the first line. For example; Diana: "You know enough to make him jealous and angry."

4. If the first lines of text are stage directions these are entered thus:
Hector. Enter to song.
